The Asian & Pacific Islander National Cancer Survivors Network (APINCSN) is national network of cancer survivors, caregivers, advocates, health care providers, researchers, community organizations and cancer programs that are concerned about the issue of cancer in the Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) Community. Founded in 1997, APINCSN became a program of the Asian & Pacific Islander American Health Forum (APIAHF), which is a national health policy and advocacy organization whose mission is to enable Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders to attain the highest possible health and well-being.

This APINCSN Cancer Resource Directory was supported by Grant/Cooperative Agreement Number U58/CCU923071-02 from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Introduction

The National Cancer Institute estimates that there are approximately 9.6 million Americans with a history of cancer who were alive in January 2000. However, there is still no accurate data on the number of AAPIs affected by, living with, or surviving cancer. It is known that among Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders (AAPIs), cancer deaths have increased at a faster rate compared to any other racial and ethnic population. For instance, American Samoan men living in Hawaii and in California were ten times more likely to be diagnosed with Nasopharyngeal cancer, seven times more likely to be diagnosed with liver cancer and three times more likely to be diagnosed with stomach cancer as compared to White American Males. Factors such as acculturation, low cancer screening rates, and lack of cultural sensitivity continue to place a toll on the cancer morbidity and mortality rates of AAPIs. It has been reported that 62% of Asian American women over the age of 18 reported a pap testing the past three years, which is much lower than that of non-Hispanic White women (82%).

Yet, despite the rise in cancer detection and treatment methodologies to address the growing rate of cancer in the United States, there is also an increasing dearth of education, preventative, treatment, and support services that are culturally and linguistically appropriate to serve the needs of and that are accessible to various AAPI communities. To increase community awareness of organizations that provide AAPI specific resources and provide health professionals with a tool to improve the quality of their patient referrals, this resource guide was developed with a comprehensive listing of organizations nationwide, profiling their location, cancer services, and ethnic and linguistic service offerings. It is our hope that the development of this resource guide will be instrumental in narrowing gaps in health care that exist between AAPIs and mainstream populations as well as encourage other AAPI-serving organizations to increase their scope of services and influence through APIAHF.

Purpose of the APINCSN Cancer Resource Directory

The APINCSN Cancer Resource Directory is a compilation of organizations that offer cancer services for Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) communities. The APINCSN Cancer Resource Directory provides detailed information about some of our network members, the AAPI communities they serve, and the types of cancer services they provide. Cancer patients, survivors, advocates, organizations and health care professionals have requested the development of this directory to assist in patient referrals to culturally and linguistically appropriate cancer services.

How to Use the APINCSN Cancer Resource Directory

This directory is comprised of an alphabetical listing of network members and organizations who expressed interest in promoting their resources to the community through a listing in this guide. Each organization has been allotted one page with the following information: contact information; cancer services; cancer/site served; language services; ethnicities served; regions covered; and fees for services.

In addition to individual listings of organizations, there is also an index in which individuals can search for an organization by category, such as region, cancer services, cancer site, and ethnicity.

If you find any errors in or would like to update your entry for the online version of the APINCSN Cancer Resource Directory, please contact us. We are open to suggestions to improve the usability of the online directory to best meet your needs.

If you would like to be included in the online directory in addition to becoming an APINCSN member, please contact Nicole Kang at (415) 568-3311 or nkang@apiahf.org.
